PR9.NET November 19, 2007 - Westboro, MA - When it comes to finding abrasives for your factory or application, IndustrialLeaders.com, known as the North American Industrial Register, has the suppliers and products to best meet your needs, quality requirements and budget, according to the company. Recently the company announced to the media it added over 500 U.S. and Canadian-based suppliers of abrasives in its American Abrasives Buying Guide and Catalog.

The guide includes offerings for abrasive wheels, non-woven abrasives, wire-sawing grains and powders, abrasive tapes, stones, sheets, saws, sapphires, rolls, resins, pulverizes, abrasive powder, media, cut-off tools, belts, centerless grinders, coated, superabrasives, grinding tools and machines, discs, diamond abrasives, compounds, cones, blast cleaners, cloth, carbide, cut-off blades, miniature abrasive belts, blast cleaning equipment, abrasion resistant materials and associated products.

The buying guide is located at <http://www.IndustrialLeaders.com/listings/abrasives.html> which is available in multiple languages, including French, Spanish, German, Italian, Portuguese, Chinese, Japanese and Korean, in addition to English. Although the guide focuses primarily on the U.S. and Canadian marketplace, other major markets throughout North, Central and South America are covered as well, including Mexico, Puerto Rico, Brazil, Venezuela and Argentina.

"The American Abrasives Buying Guide is more than just a place to find and compare offers from manufacturers and suppliers of abrasive products in the Americas," says Conrad Bailey, Business Director of IndustrialLeaders.com. "More importantly, it serves as a platform to promote American-made abrasives in markets all over the world and in return help grow local economies, generate jobs and ideally improve the livelihoods of North and Latin Americans from Ontario, Canada to Buenos Aires, Argentina and every city in between."

A premier partner of IndustrialCOOP.com, which Bailey claims to be the only industrial-focused co-operated search engine filtered for engineers and technical buyers, Industrial Leaders has nearly doubled its revenues every year since its founding in 2003. "It has always been our goal to help American manufacturers compete in the international marketplace and the best way we know how to do that is through our specialized, strategically promoted directories such as The American Abrasives Buying Guide," says Bailey.
