Voices.com has just created My Voices.com Profile, an application made specifically for Facebook giving those who use their voice for business a new, innovative way to market their talents.

PR9.NET November 26, 2007 - San Francisco, CA – Voices.com, the voice over marketplace, is engaging the Facebook phenomenon with a hot new application called "My Voices.com Profile". My Voices.com Profile gives a strategic promotional advantage to those who provide vocal services including voice actors, singers, podcasters, authors and public speakers. With a wide variety of professionals who could make use of the My Voices.com Profile, the app promises to be a perfect marketing tool that makes getting to a user's website easier where resume information and audio samples are readily available via a flash player for interested parties to listen to.

The My Voices.com Profile app is accessible to Facebook users and the one requirement is that people who install the app have a profile at Voices.com. The audio and application itself is hosted at Voices.com giving professional voice artists the ability to effortlessly update or add new audio to their profile. All Facebook users who are also members of Voices.com can easily add the application by searching the Facebook Application Directory to participate in this new and exciting marketing opportunity.

Voices.com CEO, David Ciccarella, says, "My Voices.com Profile is an ingenious way for voice artists to take advantage of Facebook to direct traffic to their demos on their Voices.com website with no programming skills required. Voices.com members will be the first to receive the benefits of this useful application when partaking in social networking activities."
