Make 2008 the year you work at home! Work-At-Home Success Expo will provide information, resources, training, and tools to teach you about working at home and to create a plan to make it happen.

PR9.NET December 29, 2007 - Palmyra, VA - Among the New Years Resolutions of losing weight and quitting smoking, are those in which people promise themselves to increase their financial security. Like most resolutions, efforts are abandoned within the first few weeks, and forgotten within a month until the expense of the holidays hit again. Leslie Truex, aka the Pajama Mama says that 2008 can be different for people looking to change their financial situations. She is hosting the second annual Work-At-Home Success Expo in January 2008 to help people not only learn how to turn a few hours a week into additional income, but create a plan to make it happen. The WAHS Expo will be a virtual expo hosted completely online. Visitors will be able to "visit" exhibits, pick up free gifts, and attend seminars, but they won't have to drive any where, pay for parking or hire babysitters.

The month long Work-At-Home Success Expo 2008 will be FREE to attend. It will be a great opportunity for those just starting to research about working at home or those who have been looking for a long time to learn what it really takes to succeed at working at home, different options available to work at home, as well as how to make a plan and take action to reach work-at-home success.

WAHS Expo is also looking for successful entrepreneurs, authors and speakers to host exhibits and teleseminars.
