Cash Doctors' online community is rapidly expanding with the first in a series of additions, designed especially for the public, being released today.

PR9.NET January 15, 2008 - Cash Doctors, Australia's leading online payday loan provider, has today announced the first release of a series of website additions that are contributing to it's growing online community.

Cash Doctors and co-founder and Director Séan Teahan said that the purpose of the online community was to create a space online where both Cash Doctors clients and the public alike can gain a greater understanding of their finances and the associated issues.

As a result, not only are they getting a short-term solution to the financial woes, but they are getting tools to help them have more money in the long run too.

The first addition made available to visitors to the Cash Doctors website is 'The Cash Doctors Story' mini-documentary.

This video documents the story of how Cash Doctors' came to fruition, showing the struggle that the co-founders Greg Ellis and Shane Teahan experienced as they developed Australia's fastest online payday loan provider.

The video presents itself with a distinctly homegrown feel, adding strength to their statement that they, unlike most other payday loan providers, can identify with their clients through shared experiences.

"We too know what it's like to need a short-term cash fix, having found ourselves short of cash many times in years gone by," Mr Teahan said.

Another innovative feature that can be found on the company's website is the Cash Doctors Budget Template.

The company found that a lot of their clients wanted to create a budget for their finances but had no idea where to start. The template breaks down the expenditures in the average lifestyle in order to help people organize your finances.

These are just the first in a series of planned additions, with the next release due in the next fortnight.
