Virginia Company Among First to Acquire New Technology, Anticipates Surge of Interest From Churches Nationwide.

PR9.NET February 13, 2008 - Ashland, VA - In late 2007, the Xerox Corporation, one of America's leading lights in the printing industry, unveiled the iGen3 printing press. Among the first companies to place an order for this remarkable digital press was Premiere Envelope, a division of Premiere Colors. Premiere Envelope is a specialty printer that caters to churches and religious institutions across the United States. Premiere Envelope designs, prints, and handles fulfillment for many types of envelopes that are necessary to the day-to-day functioning of churches of all denominations. Items such as offering envelopes, children's envelopes, church envelopes, stewardship envelopes, and building fund envelopes – all of which serve special purposes within the church – can be custom designed, printed, and delivered by Premiere Envelope.

Premiere Envelope was begun by a team of printing professionals, led by CEO Wanda C. Simpson, who understood this particular market and saw that it was not being properly served by more traditional printing services. Premiere Envelope has shown tremendous success in its five years of operations, and the interest in their services shows no sign of slowing down; hence, their interest in the Xerox iGen3, which will allow Premiere Envelopes heretofore unknown printing possibilities. Full color printing will be achieved quickly, efficiently, and with remarkable clarity with the new equipment, and Premiere Colors is proud to be among the few companies in America that will be utilizing this technology.

Top of the line printing equipment is a major investment, but Premiere Envelopes knows that it's the right investment for their clientele, which demands only the best. Ministry is a calling, and the team at Premiere Envelopes feels that their calling is to assist churches in their operations and their outreach efforts. Any church or religious organization that is seeking quality printing for envelopes or other outreach materials should turn to Premiere Envelopes and discuss the Xerox iGen3 with them.
