PR9.NET February 21, 2008 - WAYNE, PA - Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) software producer Deacom, Inc. has joined the Personal Care Products Council (PCPC) to aid cosmetics and personal care product manufacturers in efficiently and effectively developing and selling safe, high quality, and innovative goods.

The PCPC, formerly the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association, is the leading national trade association for the cosmetic and personal care products industry and represents the most innovative names in beauty today. For more than 600 member companies, the PCPC is the voice on scientific, legal, regulatory, legislative and international issues for the personal care product industry.

As the developer of the DEACOM Integrated Accounting and ERP Software System for cosmetics and personal care product manufacturers, Deacom helps streamline business processes, including lab management and regulatory reporting, sales order entry, accounting, production, inventory and lot tracking, purchasing, and retail stores/Point-of-Sale (POS) in a single system. Deacom will support the PCPC mission by helping members maintain productive and profitable companies while continuing to grow and prosper in a competitive marketplace.

Jay Deakins, President of Deacom, Inc., says, "Our involvement with the PCPC is an example of our commitment to solving the most challenging business process issues facing cosmetics and personal care product manufacturers today. We look forward to working extensively with the association and fellow members."
