Realty Group reveals room for growth in the post-sub prime market

PR9.NET March 06, 2008 - Tampa, FL - In 2008, the J. A. Barnett Realty Group continued its successful real estate blog. Now in its second year, the Florida Commercial Properties Blog at <http://www.jabarnettrealty.com/FloridaCommercialPropertyBlog/> discusses real estate from a professional's perspective.

The blog focuses on the Florida commercial real estate market but ranges across national trends, buying tips and property tax law. Where real estate was once viewed as static, safe field, the recent sub prime correction has led to a reevaluation of the market and now, groups like J. A. Barnett inspire renewed interest from agents and property owners who want to succeed in 2008.

"We're looking forward to 2008 to bring about better prices and more favorable investments," said J. A. Barnett partner Peter Barnett. "Don't hesitate to contact us with any investment questions regarding investment real estate."

The blog is only one tool the company uses to keep real estate investors informed. J. A. Barnett also offers a newsletter and white paper for those interested in commercial property investment, a searchable property index and web tools for clients. In conjunction with internet consultant GILL Media, the company hopes to provide a comprehensive resource for commercial property investment in Florida.

"Browse our current inventory on <http://www.jabarnettrealty.com> or contact us to let us know what type of investment you are looking for," said Mr. Barnett. "We can analyze your needs and return requirements to let you know which property type and size would best benefit your situation."
