PR9.NET March 17, 2008 - WAYNE, PA - Jay Deakins has been recognized by Supply & Demand Chain Executive Magazine as a 2008 Pro to Know. As the founder of Deacom, Inc., the producer of the DEACOM Integrated Accounting and Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) Software System, Deakins received this honor for his commitment to helping building component, modular building, batch process, and mixed-mode manufacturers build 21st century supply chains with a single, integrated software system.

The March 2008 issue of Supply & Demand Chain Executive features supply chain leaders in three categories - practioner, practitioner team, and provider. Deakins was selected as a Provider Pro to Know for his view on the role of technology in enabling the 21st century economy and his contribution to new processes and technologies that have helped manufacturers move toward this vision.

"Today manufacturers are facing rapidly changing competitive situations that need new and more varied reporting and controls," says Deakins. "As an integrated ERP software provider, it's our mission to deliver a comprehensive system that is able to quickly adapt to rapidly developed products and environments."

Deakins developed the DEACOM System in 1995 to seamlessly link all areas of a manufacturer - from production and inventory control, to order entry and invoicing - in order to improve productivity and profitability. Today Deakins continues to help manufacturers manage their complex business processes simply and efficiently on a day-to-day basis as Deacom president.

Andrew K. Reese, Editor of Supply & Demand Chain Executive, congratulates Deakins on his acceptance as a Pro to Know. "His leadership has made him stand out among his peers, and we are proud to include him in this year's Pros to Know issue," says Reese.
