The North American economy has proven to be unreliable as of late, but that doesn't mean that designer handbags are out of the budget of average consumers.

PR9.NET March 18, 2008 - Saskatchewan, Canada – Freebagdiva.com (<http://www.freebagdiva.com>), a membership outlet for US and Canadian citizens looking for low-cost designer handbags, has opened their doors to accept new customers. Men and women eighteen years of age or older are allowed to participate in the designer handbag reward program through www.freebagdiva.com, which places high-end handbags and purses into the hands of the average consumer even in the midst of a less-than-favorable economic situation. By utilizing the internet to offer this service, Freebagdiva.com gives even rural customers no-hassle access to the designer wares that their service boasts.

"I know that the 'freebie market' is very competitive, but I've certainly come up with an original angle with the handbags" says Chelsea Filan, the creator of Freebagdiva.com. "Freebagdiva.com is the first website of its kind, delivering free designer label handbags to all of North America."

Much like the 'Free Apple Ipod(R)' and 'Free Xbox 360(TM)' markets, Freebagdiva.com (<http://www.freebagdiva.com>) operates on a similar premise – an incentivized rewards program. Except in this case, the reward earned by the consumer is a free handbag or purse from designers such as Fendi, Louis Vuitton and Prada. And, to further differentiate Free Bag Diva's offer from the numerous purveyors of incentivized-based rewards programs, Freebagdiva.com only requires members to complete one offer in addition to the traditional referral requirements.

Free Bag Diva's services are open to North American residents eighteen years of age and older.
