VBS announces Kidsnax as first health food partner for 'force for good' initiative

PR9.NET March 26, 2008 - London – Viacom Brand Solutions (VBS) – the sales house for MTV, VH1, Nickelodeon and Paramount Comedy – is taking the lead to promote advertising as a 'force for good' in tackling societal issues including child obesity.

Meeting with food industry experts and nutritionists at the Westminster Food & Nutrition Forum Keynote Seminar last week (19.03.08), VBS announced it had secured new food product Kidsnax as its first health food partner of the 'force for good' initiative.

Matching advertising investments pound for pound, the initiative aims to encourage the industry to use the power of TV demonstrating that the medium can and should be deployed more expansively as a force for good to positively change behaviour, on issues such as health and the environment.

The collaborative approach from VBS has been devised to show that the promotion of healthy food alternatives will drive a greater change of attitudes towards food than advertising bans.

Kidsnax is a new competitor to the growing health food market, launched by entrepreneur Mark Gould this month. Using Nickelodeon characters such as Dora the Explorer and SpongeBob Squarepants, the Kidsnax TV campaign will promote Kidsnax health bars and snacks as healthy and tasty snack options.

Launching in May, the 30 second Kidsnax TV spot will air across the Nickelodeon channels. The bespoke TV campaign, created and planned by VBS, will use the Nickelodeon characters to drive awareness of Kidsnax products such as the Real Fruit Bars which contain 99.9% real fruit, highlighting to children that healthy food can be tasty and an alternative to crisps and confectionary.

The Kidsnax campaign follows on from the success of the Ella's Kitchen campaign created by VBS in 2006. The shared-risk airtime campaign was developed to drive vital distribution of its 100% organic health food snacks and the success demonstrated the VBS partnership was vital in promoting healthy food choices to kids and putting the products within reach of consumers.

Nick Bampton, MD of VBS said: "VBS is committed to proving that advertising can be a force for good. Our partnership with Kidsnax has led to a bespoke TV campaign that engages with children to communicate the importance of healthy snack alternatives."

Mark Gould, Managing Director for Kidsnax said: "Children are exposed to many snack alternatives, not all of which are good for them. This campaign will allow us tap into the youth audience of these channels and generate awareness of our healthy snack options, encouraging children to make more beneficial choices."

The Kidsnax deal is the second of ten to be announced in 2008. In February, VBS announced the first deal in the FFG initiative to promote fire safety with the CLG.
