PR9.NET April 08, 2008 - WAYNE, PA - START-IT magazine recently ranked Deacom, Inc., producer of the DEACOM Integrated Accounting and Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) Software System, among the top emerging technology providers for the manufacturing marketplace in its 2008 START-IT 125 list.

The DEACOM Software System serves the building component, manufactured building, paint, ink, adhesive, sealant, coating, pharmaceutical, specialty chemical, food, beverage, and cosmetics manufacturing industries by linking all business processes in a single, integrated system. DEACOM is configured to handle a variety of unique requirements without costly customization.

The editors of START-IT magazine, along with their editorial advisory board, selected Deacom from more than 300 companies for its directory of the most influential technology providers in the manufacturing space. The selection process was based on criteria such as customer references; business-model strength and execution; market leadership; and technological innovation through partnerships.

"Each year the editors of START-IT must be more critical in examining the top 125 technology providers," START-IT editor Peggy Smedley says. "The START-IT 125 lets our readers know about the best solutions, who can provide them, and how they can help manufacturers improve business practices."

This is the second consecutive year that START-IT has recognized Deacom as a manufacturing technology leader.
