The leading divorce firm in the state extends its legal advice to podcasting and LIVE call-in attorney sessions online.

PR9.NET April 08, 2008 - Raleigh, N.C. – Rosen Law Firm, the leading divorce firm in North Carolina, announced today it has launched NC Divorce Talk Radio, a set of three online programs: Carolina Roundtable, Rosen Live, and NC One-on-One. Updated regularly, each show provides listeners with in-depth advice and analysis on divorce-related matters and features some of the hottest debates concerning family law in the U.S.

"We decided to launch the first online radio show in the state that specifically targets divorce because its more interactive than a Web site or even a blog," says Lee Rosen, founder and president of Rosen Law Firm, who has been practicing divorce law for more than twenty years. "And through the Internet, we can literally serve an unlimited number of listeners across the state and throughout the nation."

Each program on NC Divorce Talk Radio offers interactive ways to obtain the most information on divorce and other family issues: Rosen Live allows listeners to call in at 11 a.m. each Wednesday to have questions answered by an experienced Rosen attorney on topics including child custody and support, alimony, property distribution and separation; NC One-on-One highlights authors, psychologists, and other prominent guests who are called in to talk about the work they're doing in the family law arena; and Carolina Roundtable features a panel of Rosen attorneys who dive head-on into heated divorce issues in the media with real advice and expert analysis.

Some of the news topics already featured on NC Divorce Talk Radio include Paul McCartney's spousal entitlement and how he's protecting his assets, lessons learned from Eliot Spitzer's prostitution scandal, and what evidence could be used against you in a no-fault divorce.

"We take hot issues that are currently buzzing around in the media and apply them to everyday situations that people here in North Carolina may be facing," says Rosen.
