Beracah Homes, a modular home manufacturer in Delaware recently celebrated it's 5th year in business and sent it's top producer (Bay to Beach Builders of Greenwood) it's 100th home. Unique in its construction and placement in a critical wind area, Beracah is increasing efficiency out of their Greenwood plant to meet requests for homebuilders in Coastal Delaware.

PR9.NET April 14, 2008 - Greenwood, DE – Beracah Homes, Inc. announced Monday that Bay to Beach Builders of Greenwood has taken delivery of its 100th home. Bay to Beach is the highest producing Preferred Builder for Beracah, with a 20 home per year average. Bay to Beach's 100th home is a unique blend of modular manufacturing and structural engineering, as the home will reside in a critical wind area in Rehoboth Beach, DE.

On the day of their 5-year anniversary, Beracah Homes of Greenwood delivered Deric Parker of Bay to Beach Builders his 100th home. A Preferred Builder since Beracah Home's first production run on April 7th 2003, Bay to Beach primarily completes new residential construction, but the company has recently ventured into commercial projects. Using Beracah's assembly line system of stick built construction, Bay to Beach was recently rewarded the contract to build the new Cheer Center in Greenwood.

Their 100th home is unique for Bay to Beach Builders and Beracah in that the home required a greater amount of engineering and support structures so it would withstand high winds. "In Delaware's coastal areas, where wind speeds from storms can increase structural damage to homes and neighboring properties, this milestone home is built to withstand winds of 110 mph. This thing [home] is built like a tank," said Mike Roup (Engineering Manager of Beracah Homes). Deric Parker adds, "We're finding that as building code requirements have been become increasingly more demanding, our modular processes have given us a huge advantage over homes built entirely on site when it comes to value and structural integrity."
