Pathway Landscape Design has recently re-launched their website to include a forum and a tutorial section to allow home owners to learn how to professionally landscape their gardens.

PR9.NET June 11, 2008 - Fort Lee, NJ – Pathway Landscape Design has recently re-launched their website to include a forum and a tutorial section to allow home owners to learn how to professionally landscape their gardens.

Pathway Landscape Design has been serving clients in the Scottsdale, Arizona area for more than 10 years, creating and designing beautiful gardens. The company provides custom landscape design, hardscaping, lighting and maintenance services.

Home owners are always looking for that something extra in their home gardens, yet many of them have a list of questions on how to achieve the look that they are after. Whether it is curb appeal for the front yard or creating an oasis in the backyard to enjoy with friends, family or just to unwind, Pathway Landscape Design can provide the solutions.

In addition to their professional services, the company is also looking to provide support to home owners in the form of tutorials on their website, along with the creation of a community forum. The forum will allow home owners to ask questions and share ideas in a like minded environment.

In a new, easy to use online platform, consumers and home owners will have access to valuable information about their personal gardens and garden projects.
