

Beijing-Symposium on economic ethics prepared by the non-profit organisation Civilisations Matter

Civilisations Matter International Society for Intercultural Dialogue e.V., June 25, 2008

URL: <http://www.pr9.net/science/conferences/8503june.html>

Subsequent to the Beijing Olympic Games the Society for Intercultural Dialogue based in Berlin will organise an interdisciplinary encounter between European and Asian businessmen and scientists. For reasons concerning public security, the Chinese authorities have decided to ban all events which should have taken place during the Olympic Games. The 4-day-symposium now will take place in September.

PR9.NET June 25, 2008 - CM, Berlin - Subsequent to the Beijing Olympic Games the non-profit Society for Intercultural Dialogue based in Berlin (cm-germany.org) will organise an interdisciplinary encounter between European and Asian businessmen and scientists. For reasons concerning public security, on short notice, the Chinese authorities have decided to ban all events which should have taken place during the Olympic Games. The four day-symposium in the European Year for Intercultural Dialogue, which will now take place in September, deals with shifts in values and sustainability.

Participants comprise some of the most important business representatives of transport, energy, telecommunications and other economic branches from both China and Europe. Scientists from Europe, the USA and China also view this question as a chance and challenge to further the dialogue between East and West. Wolfgang Sachs, a researcher at the Wuppertal Institute for Climate, Environment and Energy has claimed the topic of the symposium as being of "dramatic relevance". Sachs received a Nobel Certificat for his contribution to the award of the Noble Peace Prize for 2007 to the IPCC together with former US vice president Al Gore.

The Berlin Society wants to create a platform promoting dialogue among different political, religious and ethnic groups, beyond the political arena and independent from political and economic interests. Under the name "Civilisations Matter", stressing the need for an interdisciplinary as well as cultural debate, the Society will provide a space where business managers, scientists, politicians, journalists and artists can meet. These interdisciplinary activities will be an "urgently needed contribution to peace maintenance among cultures", said one of the society's curators, Peter Ruof, business manager, co-founder of the Carl Duisburg Society in Washington.

###

About Civilisations Matter International Society for Intercultural Dialogue e.V.

Aim of the non-profit Society is to promote science and research, art and culture and understanding among populations. The Society will offer Symposia, conferences, workshops, conventions and cultural events. Thinkers, scientists, philosophers, artists, politicians, representatives from various cultures, religions as well as business men should be brought together and deal with issues aiming at a global and future oriented way of thinking.

www.cm-germany.org
info@cm-germany.org

Chairman, CEO
Wolfram R. Bauer

Deputy of the Chairman
Florian Brux-Kuhnert

Phone: +49-30-47033418
FAX: +49-30-70221232
Website: <http://www.cm-germany.org>
E-Mail: pr@cm-germany.org
Address: Wichmannstraße 5
D-10787 Berlin
Germany