PR9.NET June 25, 2008 - Reno, Nevada - Internetwork Expert, Inc., a pioneering leader in Cisco CCIE Lab Exam training, today announced that Scott Morris (CCIE #4713), a four-time CCIE, has joined the company as a CCIE Instructor.

Scott Morris has been in the Cisco networking industry for over 12 years and belongs to an elite group of engineers worldwide holding four CCIE certifications. Scott was one of the first individuals to pass the Cisco Design Specialist certification in 1998, and soon after passed the CCIE Lab Exam in Routing and Switching. He then went on to obtain CCIE certifications in ISP-Dial, Security, and Service Provider. Scott is currently preparing for the Voice CCIE, and the newly announced Cisco Certified Design Expert (CCDE).

Prior to joining Internetwork Expert, Scott was Vice President of Technical Training and an Instructor at IPEXpert. While working at IPEXpert, Scott developed and delivered CCIE classroom training, as well as initiated new product development. Scott is currently a regular columnist for the TCPMag Journal.

At Internetwork Expert, Scott will be focusing on delivering CCIE classes and boot camps to candidates around the world. He is joining an already exceptionally talented set of CCIE instructors at Internetwork Expert, including five-time CCIE Brian Dennis (CCIE #2210), three-time CCIE Brian McGahan (CCIE #8593), and four-time CCIE Petr Lapukhov (CCIE #16379).

"Scott has built a tremendous reputation within the CCIE community of providing high-caliber CCIE training classes and curriculum," said Brian Dennis, CEO and Co-Founder of Internetwork Expert. "His expert-level knowledge of CCIE technologies and unique teaching style will be a great complement to our curriculum and instructional offerings."
