Regency Office Products has launched its Independent Sales Channel program, a recruitment program to attract experienced sales professionals.

PR9.NET June 25, 2008 - RALEIGH, N.C. – Regency Office Products (www.regencyofficeproducts.com), one of the nation's fastest growing, independently-owned office products companies, announces today the launch of its Independent Sales Channel program. This recruitment program, developed to meet growing customer demands and capture new markets, provides key incentives to attract experienced sales professionals.

The program package includes a commission structure that allows sales team members to earn up to 50 percent gross profit return on their diverse product line book of business. Offering expense allowances, bonus accelerators and no geographic boundaries, as well as dental, major medical and 401K benefits, Regency expects to achieve significant growth in the skill and depth of its sales force.

"Launching the Independent Sales Channel program is another way we remain focused on our unified goal of delivering the best service in the industry, and retaining the best people," says Eric Beguelin, president and founder of Regency Office Products. "Our success and growth in the last several years further demonstrates and reinforces the value that Regency brings to any sales professional and our customer."

In the past five years, the company has experienced unprecedented annual growth, totaling more than $21 million in annual sales during 2007. Adding to the company's already extensive line of products and services, Regency plans to introduce a Go Green initiative, technology enhancements and other strategic partnerships this year. Regency currently operates seven offices in five states.
