Disasters are occurring frequently, magnifying the need for inventory service providers. This turnkey business, which can minimize the startup cost of time and money, was created through years of trial and error to provide support to entrepreneurs during the startup years and beyond.

PR9.NET June 27, 2008 - Indianapolis, IN - Hartman Inventory LLC, a personal property inventory service provider, has developed a turnkey package to help others start their own full- or part-time inventory business. The business model is similar to a franchise, but there are no royalties fees.

The Hartman Inventory Systems is an all-inclusive product for starting and growing an inventory service business. The manual includes step-by-step details on how to compile and process inventories, how to market the service, plus office processes. Forms are included in print and as downloadable files which can easily be edited for branding purposes. In addition to the manual and templates, the Systems include a 2-day hands-on training program and continued support for a 3-year period. The marketing package consists of a website, hosting and eNewsletter for 3 years, plus brochure and business card design and a press release. Additional items include a business plan, equipment (computer, print and camera) and a designated geographic area.

Mike Hartman, President of Hartman Inventory Systems LLC, stated that they struggled to learn the business, and it was a long, slow start-up that cost them time and money. Members of the Hartman Inventory Group will be able to concentrate just on creating a customer base because the turnkey package has taken care of everything else. At the end of the 3-year contract, they will be able to renew and continue to receive the benefits of group membership.

Designated Geographic Areas are available throughout the United States.
